

Taiwanese Journal of Development Studies

Call for Papers / Submission Guidelines

I. Aims and Scope

The aim of the Taiwanese Journal of Development Studies (TJDS) is to combine theoretical and practical policy and interdisciplinary research. The journal passed the evaluation of Taiwan's humanities and social sciences journals by the Ministry of Science and Technology in 2022 and was designated a Category 3 journal. TJDS welcomes academic paper submissions in the fields of politics, law, sociology, Mainland China studies, and East Asian civilization and culture.

II. Call for Papers

1. TJDS is a refereed biannual periodical published in June and December.
2. TJDS accepts submissions of original articles of the following types:
 - (1) Research article: article containing original empirical or theoretical research (length should not exceed 25,000 Chinese characters or 8,000 English words).
 - (2) Review Article: comprehensive review of key literature (length should not exceed 25,000 Chinese characters or 8,000 English words).
 - (3) Research Note/Short Communication: preliminary findings of empirical research, development and discussion of new concepts, or innovation and analysis of research methods (length should not exceed 15,000 Chinese characters or 6,000 English words).

 - (5) Commentary, including book and film reviews (length should not exceed 5,000 Chinese characters or 2,000 English words).

The editorial board reserves the right of final decision on article types.

3. TJDS accepts both Chinese-language and English-language manuscripts; Chinese-language manuscripts must include a title and abstract in English; English-language manuscripts must include a title and abstract in Chinese.
4. Submissions must meet TJDS's editorial standards (for details, please refer to the website of the NTU Graduate Institute of National Development). When a submitted manuscript does not meet those standards, TJDS may request that the author make revisions to the manuscript before considering it for publication.
5. Copyright of articles published by TJDS is retained by the author; however, the author must provide the journal with non-compensatory, non-exclusive license to reproduce and to upload the article to the internet, allowing readers to search for, read, download, and print the article free of charge.

6. TJDS uses a double-blind review process. Manuscripts submitted for review should not contain any reference to the author; submissions must undergo blind review by at least two outside experts and further review by the Editorial Committee before being approved for publication. When necessary, response and review articles will undergo blind review by outside experts following review by the Editorial Committee.

III. Submission Procedure

1. Please submit manuscripts electronically in Word-format via e-mail to the Editorial Committee at ndjournal99@gmail.com; in the e-mail subject line, please type "Taiwanese Journal of Development Studies Article Submission."
2. Submissions should include the following items, submitted in the order listed here: title page with author byline (Chinese and English), abstract page (Chinese and English), article text, author's contact information. For details, please refer to the manuscript format guidelines on the website of the NTU Graduate Institute of National Development: <http://www.nd.ntu.edu.tw/uploads/asset/data/556e6ad26e74757317b91e00/%E6%92%B0%E7%A8%BF%E6%A0%BC%E5%BC%8F.doc>

IV. Submission Review Principles

1. Submissions are accepted for review on a year-round, on-going basis.
2. Submissions which do not conform to the aims and scope of TJDS will be rejected.
3. Submissions must be original manuscripts. Submissions found to have been published previously, to have been submitted to multiple publications, or to be in violation of academic ethics will be rejected and the author's right of submission will be suspended for a period of three years. Authors wishing to submit their manuscript elsewhere must first issue a written statement withdrawing their submission to TJDS; submissions withdrawn following the review process will be treated as rejected submissions.
4. TJDS reserves the right to decide the period in which a submitted manuscript is published based on editorial requirements.
5. TJDS reviews submitted manuscripts solely for their academic merit; published articles do not represent the views of TJDS.
